Building For Ministry

The Book That Will Save Your Church Thousands of Dollars

RALEIGH, N.C. – Author Richard C. White is proud to announce the release of his new book, Building For Ministry (published by AuthorHouse). Motivated by a driving need for pastors and congregations to understand that there is a right way and a wrong way to structure a church building program, White has compiled some of the most important facts and essential steps one needs to take to ensure their project will come in on time and under budget.

Beginning at the ground level Building For Ministry ascends upwards covering many important topics such as team building, budgets, stewardship, contractors and long-term financing. One of the most important steps is the initial research process. It is here where congregations first decide what it is they are seeking in a new or remodeled structure, its purpose and use, as well as the correct way to run a stewardship campaign.

“You don’t start with an architect...you start with a Needs Analysis and Feasibility Study, which follows on the heels of defining your ‘ministry mission.’”

As a former pastor, White believes strongly in the power of prayer guiding the congregation and members of the building teams selected to be the voice of the church body throughout the building process.

“We have recommended Prayer Teams to churches considering a building program for many years. The miracles that have resulted from the joint prayer effort have been truly amazing.”

Eliminating the monetary and human energy costs which result from poor design, and the ill will created by budgetary overruns, Richard C. White has developed a proven system that has saved churches thousands of dollars. Find out for yourself how Building For Ministry can work for your next church expansion or remodeling project.

About the Author

Residing in Raleigh, North Carolina, Richard C. White (Dick) has been involved in the development and construction business for more than 36 years. As a former pastor, White was motivated to develop “Building for Ministry” after seeing churches being ripped off by builders and architects who had little regard for the churches’ budget. After receiving a general contractor’s license White set out on his mission to correct the poor choices churches were making when embarking on a building program. Those choices often resulted in hundreds of thousands of dollars being wasted. White’s task was to show them a building methodology which resulted in substantial cost savings. His long list of customer referrals speaks for itself. White presently serves as President of Your Church Rep, LLC, a church building consulting firm, based in Raleigh, North Carolina.
